

Interdisciplinary Disability Studies (DIS) Summer 2015 Course Offerings

Now offering an Undergraduate Minor in Interdisciplinary Disability Studies

ccids.umaine.edu/interedu/ids/minor/and a Graduate Certificate in Interdisciplinary Disability Studies

ccids.umaine.edu/interedu/graduate-certificate

DIS 300 Interaction of Human Diversity and Global Environments

Designed to introduce the student to disability as an element of human diversity that has a significant reciprocal relationship with the environment. (3 credits)

Class Number: 20816

Dates: May 11, 2015 - June 12, 2015

Instructor: Elizabeth DePoy, Ph.D.

Location: Web/Online

Satisfies Cultural Diversity & International Perspective (and) Population and Environment General Education Requirement.

DIS 500 Contemporary Disability Theory

Critically examines historical and contemporary context of disability and analyzes the emergence of disability as a contemporary category of human diversity. (3 credits)

Class Number: 20862

Dates: June 15, 2015 - July 17, 2015

Instructor: Stephen F. Gilson, Ph.D.

Location: Web/Online

DIS 550 Research Seminar in Disability Studies

Provides the opportunity to apply knowledge and skill of design and methods to inquiry related to disability, diversity, and universal principles. (3 credits)

Class number: 20830

Dates: July 20, 2015 - August 21, 2015

Instructor: Elizabeth DePoy, Ph.D.

Location: Web/Online

These online courses are being offered through the University of Maine Continuing & Distance Education unit. To register please go Continuing & Distance Education's Ways to Register web page at <http://umaine.edu/cd/ways-to-register-draft/>